Colonel Edmund Haynes Taylor (1830-1923) founded the Old Taylor Distillery in 1887. Located south of Frankfort in Millville, on McCracken Pike, its design featured a limestone castle, elaborate gazebos, and sunken gardens. It was the first distillery to reach 1,000,000 certified cases of straight bourbon whiskey.

The distillery was eventually sold to the Jim Beam Corporation who ceased operation in 1972 and the property fell into disrepair. However, in 2014, a new distillery, Castle & Key, began extensive restoration of the gardens and brewing building, and will soon be distilling bourbon, rye, and gin.

It is believed that this painting was created and used in Old Taylor Distillery advertising. In the 1980's, E.H. Taylor's great-grandson, E.H. Taylor Hay, possessed the painting at his Scotland Farm near Versailles Road.
